

Personal reflection on “Great Greek Love – Project ancient toys”

I can say that overall, it was an enjoyable experience working with the team. However, there were certain challenges that prevented us from achieving the desired outcome.

Firstly, the project suffered from a small team size, Working with the group had its advantages because we often agreed quickly on new ideas etc. But it became evident that we lacked the necessary manpower to handle all aspects of the project efficiently. We often found ourselves stressing and struggling to juggle multiple responsibilities simultaneously.

Moreover, time management proved to be a the most significant obstacle throughout the project. As an already small team, we underestimated the amount of time required for certain tasks and were overly ambitious in our goals. This resulted in rushed work and compromised quality, as we constantly felt the pressure of impending deadlines.

Unfortunately, these limitations hindered our ability to reach the desired result of the project. While we managed to make significant progress and accomplish some of our objectives with great pride, there were areas where we fell short. It was disheartening to realize that our and Fenia’s initial vision couldn't be fully realized due to these constraints.

Nevertheless, I genuinely enjoyed collaborating with the team. Despite the challenges we faced, we maintained a positive mindset atmosphere, constantly encouraging one another and brainstorming creative solutions. The laughs I had and the things I learned with the team made the journey worthwhile, even if the outcome wasn't what we had hoped for.

Moving forward, it's crucial to learn from these experiences and implement improvements in future projects. Acknowledging the importance of team size and time management will be essential to ensure better project outcomes. Additionally, setting more realistic goals and expectations will help us avoid unnecessary stress and allow for a more focused and effective approach.

Overall, while the "Great Greek Love - Project Ancient Toys" didn't achieve the desired result, I value the lessons learned and the collaboration with my teammates!
